EXPLANATIONS AND INSTRUCTIONS

1. Placement and content of the privacy policy

In the context of the data collection by the responsible party and the purposes of data processing and in the interests of maximum transparency, the responsible party is obliged to provide the data with sufficient information already during the collection of data.

In addition, there is an additional obligation to provide information about data collections that are not the result of a direct survey from the customer (data collection without decision or cooperation of the customer, collection of such data from third parties, such as credit checks or customer data originating from third-party rating portals). In this case, the customer should be informed about the source of the data and whether it is a public source.

A frequently chosen solution is an easy to find privacy policy on the own website (and not only hidden in the imprint), as well as an additional link in the e-mail signature. In addition, the privacy policy can be given to the person on paper (information sheets in the company). The information requirement can also be verbal. However, since fulfillment should always be verifiable - even after a longer period of time - information in writing is recommended. In the case of non-fulfillment, high fines are threatened.

2. Profiling

Profiling is the creation of user-related personality profiles based on processed data in order to automatically assess those affected and to draw detailed conclusions about behavior and preferences.

Within the company there is no profiling as part of the data processing.

3. Plugins

No plugins are used.

4. Data Protection Officer

Due to the size and responsibilities of the company no data protection officer is necessary.
